Bleed, Trim & Safety:

Full page and two page spreads can be designed for full bleed. Any full bleed ad, including the front and back covers, requires a 1/4" bleed. Quarter and half page ads do not have a full bleed option. Ads designed to bleed must adhere to the recommended safety margin and keep all text 1/4" from the final trim size. Front covers are designed by a THM Certified Designer with client provided photos or stock images. Safety, or margin, is the distance from the "safe area" to the trimmed edge of the ad. You should keep anything you want to protect from accidental trimming within this safe area. Color, imagery and of course bleed are expected to extend well beyond the safety area. Important things to consider keeping within the margin would be text, phone numbers or logos. The safety is merely a margin to protect from anything important being accidentally trimmed during the printing process.

Color:

Advertisers understand and accept that in our normal 4-color, web offset printing process, color variations can occur and differences in the quality of paper may cause slight variations in color, clarity and overall appearance between digital proofs and the printed magazine.
